CHANGE. That word wraps up what Saint Leo College has done in the past year. Our school has been going through many changes; in it's physical appearance, it's academic requirements for admission, it's standards for students attending the college, and it's overall reputation as an institution for higher learning.

As the past year went on, everyday, it seemed, there were always improvements or changes in our colleges physical features. The grounds at our school were kept up, and always gave a prestigious look to the school.

Admission requirements have been increasing for new students wanting to enter Saint Leo over a period of time. This raising of academic standards brought a more determined group of new students to Saint Leo with each semester the requirements went up. The determination of the student population to learn and to get involved showed people looking in on the school that our college was a serious institution for higher learning.

Just as the new students had a strong drive to learn, the students already attending Saint Leo increased their desire to learn as the faculty increased their expectations of the students.

These changes experienced by Saint Leo College increased the respect of our school as an academic institution. The overall population of Saint Leo, faculty and students, wanted other people and other institutions to CATCH OUR ANGLE, and realize that Saint Leo College students and faculty are people to respect and to watch out for in the future.

The students of Saint Leo College were in a constant state of change. They were changing in the way they handled themselves, in the way they approached their academic career, and the way they approached their extra-curricular life within the college.

The way the students handled themselves with their fellow students changed. The students had more respect for their peers and began to become more aware of the differences among the student population. Students became more accepting of differences through programs trying to increase awareness of social problems on our campus. All of these changes factored in the main change of the way students handled themselves with the rest of the student body.

Academics used to be a word that most students did not think much about. This past year more students began to become more serious about their studies and main purpose for being in college. The academic attitude change seen in many professors was an aid in the change seen amongst the student population. Another factor was the "crack down" of the college's standards for the students. Saint Leo students were becoming more aware of the changing academic standards on campus and adapted very well.

Finally, the students changed in their extra-curricular activities within the college. More students became involved with campus organizations giving a broader view on student issues. This increase in involvement was a great asset to the Student Government Association, it brought more students to the meetings and thus more students to work on committees dealing with campus issues.

These changes seen among the students at Saint Leo helped other institutions to realize that Saint Leo students are going to be very successful in their futures. We the students of Saint Leo College wanted people to CATCH OUR ANGLE.

Student Life

The kittens made for a lot of conversation outside of Marmion Snyder lobby.

Sheila Holland and her boyfriend Jeff Douglas spend time in the library studying. Karla Gieger and Michelle Renaulder enjoy spending time together as friends.

Student Life was an important part of Saint Leo College. More and more students were seen getting involved in what happened in their school. The students put in as much of themselves as was available and getting credit for it. All over campus you could find students working, studying, playing frisbee, hanging out with their friends, interacting with staff members or engaged in heavy discussions. It was the students energy that injected life into our school. At Saint Leo campus you could fall into your own pace of life, anything from the laid back, easy style some students expressed or the high paced frenzy of the student always on the go. Either way you looked at it, student life was something the students of Saint Leo held in high regard.

Just Hangin' Around!

Brothers of Phi Kappa Sigma share in unity.
One of the many ways to arrange the rooms in the Marmion Dorm.
Kevin Kennedy finds a new friend.

"I have a close nit family here." — Laurie Zimmerman

"It is an experience that helps you grow." — Jean Tagliaferro

"It is a chance to meet new friends from different places." — Matt Cannon

"A chance at independence in a controlled environment to prepare you for the real world." — Lisa Kelaghan

Hallways are an easy place to meet people and hang out. Kim Winkler and Lisa Kelaghan can't wait to go to sleep after a long night. Friends made in the dorm also carry to the outside.

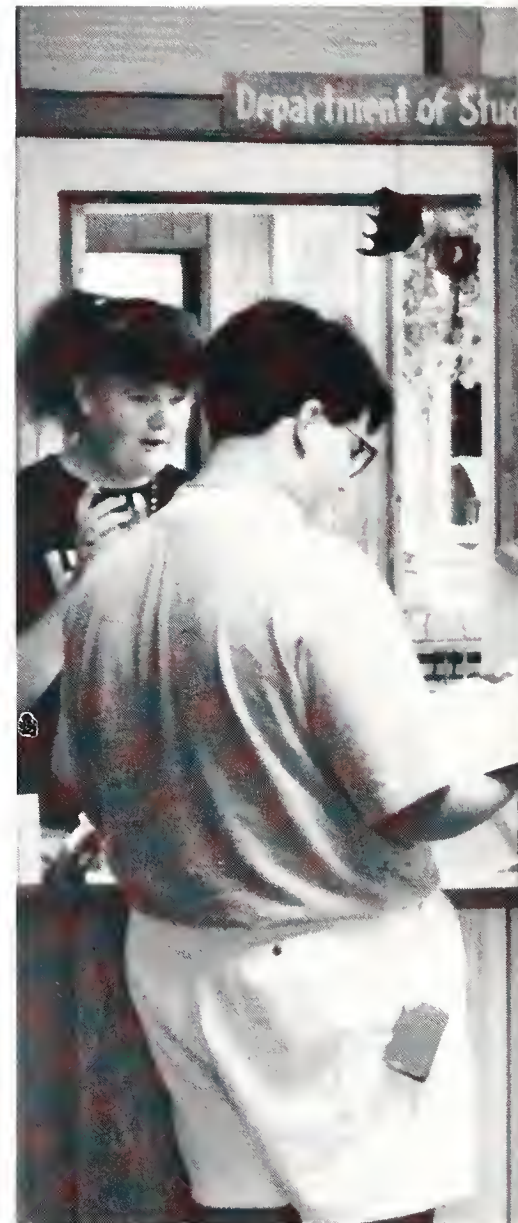

Many freshmen enter college with the hope that they will receive a good room and a decent roommate. It was quite exciting to be thrown into a situation with a total stranger. Some found having to cope with a total stranger and the challenges of cramming personal possessions into a box, unnerving. Dorm life was one of excitement and total boredom. It was great living within walking distance from classes, the pool, the gameroom, and friends. The dorm environment gave a lonely person the chance to meet many people who had similar interests. These people came from a wide variety of locations. Some found within the first several weeks that they could not get along with roomies. Roommates came in different shapes, sizes, and levels of cleanliness. It took time and patience to form a trusting friendship with your roommate.

"Going away to college has made me grow up much faster." — D.J. Heal

"Saint Leo has allowed me to branch out in my leadership abilities." — Denise Brill

"I'm already able to experience fieldwork assignments in my major." — Lesha Maurer

"I love Saint Leo but I could do without all the lab hours." — Donovan Fletcher

Freshmen life at Saint Leo was both fun and hard work. It all started with orientation. During orientation you met all the new students who felt just as scared and excited as you did. You also got to tour the campus, even if you got lost or confused. Orientation all ended with a trip to Bush Gardens, a very subtle way of telling you that you had a long year ahead of you.

During your first year at Saint Leo you were introduced to a variety of people, personalities, courses, organizations, sports and activities. All of these things helped you to find your place in the Saint Leo community.

Summer was a relaxing time for most of us. We spent our long vacation with family and friends, going to the beach or taking a trip. For a lot of us though summer meant working so we could have tuition money or spending money for the coming school year. As much fun as summer was, we could hardly wait to return to school in the fall to see friends and staff members we missed during the summer. The most important part of summer was to strengthen the family ties that sometimes loosen when we are away from home.

Senior year was perhaps the busiest time of your college career. Not only did you have to finish up all course requirements but you also had to face the fact that you must start applying for jobs. That was something that was both scary and exciting. Senior year was a parting of the ways. It saddens you to say goodbye to close friends and a secure life but at the same time you were excited at the prospect of finally being out on our own. Will you succeed or fail? It all rested in your hands.
